

GIVES GREETING TO C. A. R. SOCIETY

President to Receive Members of National Organization Wednesday Afternoon.

CONVENTION IN SESSION AT CONTINENTAL HALL

Reports Show District of Columbia Has Largest Individual Organization—Mrs. Lothrop Honored.

President Wilson will receive the Children of the American Revolution Wednesday afternoon at the close of the convention of the Children of the American Revolution. This was announced at the annual convention of the National Society of the Children of the American Revolution, held this morning in the "children's room" in Memorial Continental Hall.

Mrs. Horace Towner, wife of Representative Towner, who has been largely instrumental in securing the privilege of the members to meet the President, made the announcement, and was given a vote of thanks by the assembled delegates.

The reception to the children, it was announced, is to follow immediately the reception to the delegates of the C. A. R., of which organization the society of children of the American Revolution is an offshoot, and the existing state directors and other members are requested to meet at the White House at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, a vice president of the society, presided in place of Mrs. Ida L. Cummins, the president. A telegram from Mrs. Cummins, who is in Pasadena, Cal., in which the president of the society regretted not being able to be present, she being en route for Hawaii, she also sent greeting from the societies at Los Angeles and Pasadena.

District Report.

The District of Columbia has the largest society in the organization. It was brought out this morning. Following the report of Mrs. Alfred E. Hansmann, state director for the District, in which it was reported that there are eight societies under her supervision, with a total membership of more than 200. Mrs. Clayton Emig, state director for the District, reported the report of the largest organization, the Gov. Thomas Wells Society, of which she is president.

This local society, Mrs. Emig brought out, has a membership of 220 members. Twenty-five new members were added during the twelve months just closed. Twelve girls were graduated into the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The affairs of the District societies are in line with the affairs of the society at large, it seems, for reports from presidents of organizations in the country were equally glowing, and all the status in high-water mark, according to the reports of the officers of the general society and of the individual society presidents.

Reports were received from Miss Catherine Curtis, recording secretary; Mrs. Brumback, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Curtis, registrar; Mrs. Violet Blair Janin, treasurer, and from Mrs. Lawrence H. Quirk, vice president in charge of organization.

Tribute to Mrs. Daniel Lothrop.

A pretty tribute to Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, founder of the national society, was paid this morning by the presentation of a bouquet of violets and sweet peas, which she accepted with a graceful expression of thanks to the members of the society, whose love, she said, she knows she always has, whether they present it in high-water mark, or in the low tide of adversity.

In her address of welcome Mrs. Lothrop laid stress upon the recent work for the Red Cross Society. At the time of the report of the District officers, Mrs. Lothrop took occasion to compliment highly the local leaders, and spoke of Henry S. Brackinridge, the assistant secretary of war, as "Little Henry Brackinridge," who was a member of the Capital Society. Mrs. Lothrop told of Mrs. Brackinridge's activities in that society when he was a youth, and pointed to him as the type of man turned out by the national society.

Resolutions of regret at the absence of Mrs. Charles W. Brown, the national chairman, who is ill, was passed and the corresponding secretary directed to forward a copy of the resolution to the chairman. A resolution of greetings to the president in California was also passed.

Portrait to Be Unveiled.

Tomorrow afternoon honor is to be done Mrs. Lothrop, who founded the society in April, 1895, when a large portrait of her, painted by Edmund C. Tarbell, will be unveiled at 4 o'clock in the children's room. This room, it was brought out this morning, is owned in absolute fee simple by the children, with the deeds all paid, and with a balance of more than $5,000 in the national treasury.

Former Justice Stanton J. Peelle is to deliver the oration. Prayer is to be offered by Rev. Henry N. Couden, chaplain of the House of Representatives. In the absence of Mrs. Cummins, Mrs. Howard probably will preside and deliver the greeting. The portrait will be unveiled by Miss Elizabeth Sawtelle and Master Perry H. Russell, after which Master Howard Somervell is to recite a poem written by Mrs. Lothrop, "Our White Liberty."

Thursday there will be no meetings of the society. Friday, from 4 to 6 o'clock, there is to be a tea at 1710 I street.

Saturday's event is to be a special pilgrimage to Mount Vernon, where services will be held under the leadership of the children April 19, 1895.

WOULD CUT PUBLICATION COST.

Mrs. Guernsey Would Have D. A. R. Magazine Issued by Outside Firm.

Advocacy of the publication of the D. A. R. official magazine by a firm which formerly issued it was made today by Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, candidate for president general. After pointing out that while under the old system the national society was not responsible for any expenses connected with the magazine except the editor's salary and office expenses, whereby the total cost of the magazine for the fiscal year, April 1, 1914, to April 1, 1915, was $2,161.62, and for the fiscal year ended April 1, 1915, was $2,140.98, Mrs. Guernsey said the cost of the magazine for the fiscal year ended April 1, 1914, when the magazine was put out by the magazine committee, was $5,340.86—"over twice what it cost under the other system."

For the fiscal year ended April 1, 1915, Mrs. Guernsey said, the magazine was published at a net loss to the society of $9,009.83.

TREASURY OFFICERS BORROWED AT RIGGS

Bank Admits Former Secretaries and Assistants Were Customers.

ALLEGED EXCESS LOANS MATTER OF PRACTICE

All, However, Taken Up So Soon as Order Issued by Controller, Officials Say.

The program of the defense in the controversy between the Riggs National Bank and officials of the Treasury Department has not yet been indicated by Secretary McAdoo, by Controller of the Currency Williams or by the attorneys who have been called in to take charge of the case. Conferees were continued today, however. Officials of Riggs bank, it was said today, do not take seriously the suggestion which has been thrown out by Controller of the Currency Williams that criminal proceedings may be brought against the bank officials.

They assert that none of the statutes of the United States has been violated by any of the officers. While admitting that the Riggs Bank had been in excess of the ratio between the loans and the capital stock authorized by the banking laws prior to 1906, the officials of the bank said that the bank had been in the national banks in the country had been accustomed to do the same thing and that the practice was well known long before 1906. Congress had changed the law so as to very greatly increase the loans which might be made in conformity with the law.

The Riggs National Bank has always been within the limit, they said.

Treasury Officials Indorsed.

Communications commenting upon the Riggs National Bank controversy, stated by John Skelton Williams, controller of the currency, to be strong in their support of the administration, have been received in the offices of the controller and of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Controller Williams declined to make any such communications public, or to reveal the identity of the communications when they wanted to borrow money.

"This office is not seeking comfort," he said. "Cautious officials of the Treasury department, it is expected, will be produced in the case at this time."

Louis officials, it was said, wrote a letter and other Treasury officials, including employees of the office of the controller of the currency and national bank examiners, alleged to have been induced by the Riggs Bank, were the subject of the probe of Controller Williams into the affairs of the institution, to which the bank officials took exception. It is suggested that the defense will endeavor to show that these loans were obtained in favor of the banking bank.

The statement of the Riggs National Bank, which it is expected, will be produced in evidence, will show, it is understood, that the two Secretaries of the Treasury and other officers of the Treasury Department were borrowers.

The statement of the Riggs National Bank, which it is expected, will be produced in evidence, will show, it is understood, that the two Secretaries of the Treasury and other officers of the Treasury Department were borrowers. Bank officials insist that these reports are incorrect, although some small loans may have been made upon indorsement. There have also been reports that most of these loans were never repaid. Persons in a position to know something of this phase of the case say that all the loans to Treasury officials were liquidated, with one exception, now in course of settlement.

Loans to Treasury Officials.

In its bill of particulars, asking for an injunction against Secretary McAdoo, Controller Williams and John Burke, treasurer of the United States—Mr. Burke being only a nominal party to the suit—the Riggs National Bank referred to this phase of the trouble between the bank and Controller Williams. The bill of particulars says that November 24, 1914, Mr. Williams called for a special report of loans made by the bank, either directly or indirectly, to the Secretaries and assistant Secretaries of the Treasury and to controllers of the currency and national bank examiners, within ten years.

The bank says that, "although said demand was wholly unauthorized by law, yet, because of its character and the information it conveyed," the information was communicated to Controller Williams. As soon as the controller received the report, the bank says, he made a call for a supplementary report showing all such loans by the bank since its organization in 1886. After this report was furnished, the bank says, he made another call for a report of all loans to employees of the controller's office, and this was made January 1, 1915.

According to the bank, Controller Williams, in an official communication dated December 22, 1914, commenting on one of the reports demanded, made what the bank calls a "gratuitous statement reflecting not only upon the plaintiff bank but upon the honor of gentlemen who had been his predecessors in the high office of assistant controller of the currency." A "gratuitous statement" was as follows:

Controller's Comments.

"From your letter of December 9, it is noted that the money loaned by the Riggs National Bank to the assistant Secretaries of the Treasury during the past ten years was apparently limited to those assistant Secretaries who were not in charge of the fiscal bureau, embracing the bureau having supervision over national banks. The other assistant Secretaries, from your statement, do not appear to have been recipients of your favors."

In its bill of particulars the bank says that "not only gratuitous statements, but in defense of its own integrity and the honor of these former high officials, the bank has been obliged to make a statement of the number and value of the loans made by the bank to the assistant Secretaries named in the report of the controller of the currency, and that they had no official connection with the United States government."

According to what is said here the bank will point out in answer to any effort of counsel for Secretary McAdoo to demand paper eligible for rediscout, that the loans to Treasury officers were improper, that as a banking and national institution the Riggs National Bank had no right to make such loans, and that it was patronized generally by public men stationed in Washington, who naturally applied to the institution when they wanted to borrow money.

The suspected existence of a private telegraph line connecting the Riggs

National Bank with a stock brokerage house in New York city was another matter that Controller Williams probed into. The Riggs National Bank, in its brief, makes it appear that it admitted that a direct wire connected it with the offices of James B. Colgate & Co., bankers and brokers, at 729 15th street, this city, and that this concern was in turn undoubtedly connected by wire with their offices in New York city; the bank in its reply to the inquiry quoted, in the brief, asserted that this instrument was maintained and operated at the sole expense of the National City Bank of New York and was used for quick communication with that bank in matters of mutual business interest. The Riggs National Bank declared it was not and never had been used for transmission of orders for the purchase or sale of stocks or other securities on the New York or other stock exchange.

Destruction of books or records was one of the charges alleged by the bank in its brief to have been brought by the plaintiff bank but upon the honor of the bank the bank declared this is not so.

Overdraft Inquiry.

An official of the bank today said that if Mr. Williams was correctly quoted, he was attempting to make it appear that Riggs National Bank had refused to send to the Treasury Department information demanded by the controller of the currency which other banks had supplied on demand in regard to their condition. He read the following extract from The Star:

"Among other orders issued from time to time, increasing the information required in the statement of condition, are for items of overdraft and losses therefrom; paper eligible for rediscout at federal reserve banks, and displacing the blanket statement of bond and stock holdings with requirement for a statement of the number and value of United States, municipal and other bonds held."

"The Riggs Bank, Controller Williams said to a reporter for The Star, is the only national bank that has refused to supply all the information demanded. Other banks have been slow or reluctant, but have finally acquiesced. The demands for these details, however, have made quite a discussion in banking circles."

"As a matter of fact," said this official, "Riggs Bank has furnished all the information requested of the banks on the regular basis, and its replies will be presented in evidence when the time comes."

JURY HOLDS SIX MEN IN POOLROOM CASES

Indicted as Promoters of Alleged Gambling Resort at Myer Station, Md.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 18.—At a session lasting about an hour, during which only three witnesses were examined, the Anne Arundel grand jury today returned presentments against the six alleged promoters of the Myer station poolroom, which was raided last January. The men presented are William Austin, alias Dan Rice; William Brooks, Fred Curtis, Sol Pink, Henry Murray and Frank Ward.

The three witnesses examined were Lieut. Harry P. Schenberger, Sergt. John Cooney and Walter Leroy Watson, all of the Baltimore city police force. Bench warrants were immediately issued for the six men.

Washingtonians Present.

The sporting element of Washington was well represented when the Anne Arundel circuit court opened its April session here this morning. After drawing the grand jury, before which is to be had the first investigation, Judge James R. Beashears delivered an unusually stinging rebuke to this particular kind of gambling.

Not only the alleged promoters of the Myer station pool room, but those who might be responsible for the escape of twenty-two men from the Anne Arundel jail after the raid, came in for his attention, and he urged that it be shown that these escapes were suffered knowingly, those responsible certainly would be indicted.

The opening of the court session was delayed for over an hour through the tardiness of Lewis R. Wade and Joseph Ward, two of the jurors who missed their car into the town. During this time the host of professional bondsmen, who had gone security for one or more of the 148 men caught in the raid, looked over the crowd, and in some instances spent a nervous time while trying to locate all of the men they had agreed to produce before the court. As far as can be learned there

ANARCHISTS SENTENCED TO TERM IN SING SING

Men Who Placed Bomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral Are Given From Six to Twelve Years.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Frank Albano and Carmine Carbone, anarchists, who made and set a bomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral March 2, when hundreds were worshipping within the edifice, were sentenced today by Judge Nott to serve not less than six years nor more than twelve in Sing Sing prison.

"From a careful reading of the testimony and a careful consideration of the case," Judge Nott said, "I have no doubt that the defendants were motivated by parties in the manufacture and in the placing of the bombs. It is true that the detective co-operated with them, but I do not believe the police were the instigators of the crime."

"The jury recommended clemency because of the age and rather weak mentality of the two men. Investigation shows that they acted alone, and were not the tools of men more dangerous than themselves. Had they been men of mature age I would have imposed the maximum penalty."

The maximum penalty for the offense of which the men were convicted is twenty-five years.
